JSTOR Update - October 31, 2007

JSTOR is pleased to announce the addition of a large number of journals and retrospective content to the archive. Due to the size of this content release, we have created a special web page that lists all of the titles. The release page may be found at:

<http://www.jstor.org/resources/oct2007.html> [1]

Today's release includes:

44 journals new to JSTOR, consisting of 2.8 million journal pages.

Portions of 191 different titles, approximately 1.78 million pages, of reworked content. The rework includes: capturing reference linking data, rescanning of illustration content to allow for image compositing, capturing Unicode characters and transliterations, indexing captions, and rescanning and/or clean-up of low quality bitmap images.

The most recent issues of 5 journals with moving walls of zero.

Although JSTOR seeks to provide every issue from a journal's run, on occasion there are issues that we are unable to find. To see which issues are missing, or for information about how to help JSTOR complete the archive, please visit JSTOR's Back Issues Needed page
